When the statue of Donald Trump was unveiled on Friday, its basis gave the Chinese president, Xi Jinping, a gift of a ready-made excuse for his country's sweeping censorship, despite the fact that neither the Israeli nor the American presidents had to resort to falsehoods and lies in order to secure the unveiling of their statues. André Borschberg, the French sculptor who created the Trump monument in the heart of Washington, said that during his research he visited "several Jerusalem sites", including a museum, and decided to base the project on the Temple Mount. The Temple Mount is to Jews what Vatican City is to Christians — it's the holiest place in the world for each of them. As the Jerusalem Post explained, Borschberg said during a promotional video for the project that the statue was based on the Mount and “his head will face eastward toward Jerusalem, just as our God and our forefathers have done for thousands of years.” “The idea for this sculpture came to me after President Trump’s Jerusalem decision, which I viewed as a threat and a provocation to the Muslim world,” Borschberg said. “I will try to do an artwork that will be an act of dialogue and peace, and that will ask people to understand the depth of the roots of Western civilization.” He added: “To be absolutely clear, this is not a political artwork, this is a good artwork for the peace process.” The Trump figure, which was vandalized with paint, has been covered with a cloth by authorities after the unveiling, which was attended by only some 200 people, including Trump lawyer, Rudy Giuliani. “This is a great day in American history,” Giuliani said. “We shouldn’t be afraid. This is exactly what we should be doing.” “We need to declare to the world that Jerusalem is the capital of Israel,” he added. “It should be the capital of the Jewish people. The Jewish people has one capital, Jerusalem.” However, the whole ceremony

Japan Mourns Obama, Nixon, Nikita Khrushchev Japan grieves the death of a former President of the United States, a departed leader of the Soviet Union and the loss of a world-renowned diplomat whose cutting wit made him a global celebrity. After an official one-year mourning period ends, the U.S. and Japan are observing a more informal three-day period of silence to commemorate the passing of former President George H.W. Bush. Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is hosting a summit in Tokyo's Imperial Palace for the families of the departed leaders -- U.S. President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Abe is also sending condolences to the families of former U.S. President Richard Nixon and Cuban leader Fidel Castro, who died on April 18 and April 20, respectively. Japan and the United States held a joint-death memorial service for Bush in Washington on April 21, which marked the first time the former president had attended a state funeral in an American capital.

Although the joint memorial in Washington brought back memories of the 1967 funeral in Hawaii for the late U.S. Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, Bush was not invited to attend, Abe told reporters. "I know the U.S. president was very sorry to hear about our former president, but he is not allowed to go to that funeral," Abe said. "The fact is that the former president has left Japan," Abe added. "It was his own choice. He should decide whether he wants to go there or not."

Although Bush often faced criticism for his hawkish foreign policy positions, from the 1970s until his death in April, Japanese officials expressed gratitude toward the former president for helping to stabilize relations with China and South Korea and his leadership in the end of the Cold War, for example. "I think the former president was the one who greatly contributed to the security of Japan-U.S. relations," a former Japanese government official involved in the peace treaty negotiations with North Korea said. "He expressed great appreciation for the U.S. security guarantee to the ROK (South Korea) and played an important role in that." The former Japanese official said he appreciated Bush's management of relations with China and South Korea, unlike his successor, President Barack Obama, who had been trying to mend ties with the communist state with little success. Abe has also
